WALKING ROUTES

Streamside Walk Heritage Walk Parish Walk

Streamside Walk A 1 mile (approx. 20 minute) quiet waterside route linking the new neighbourhoods of Thornbury Fields and The Orchards to Thornbury Town Centre. Shaded by a huge variety of trees, including the community orchard, this wildlife corridor provides a peaceful habitat for all kinds of nature. Look out for frogs and sticklebacks in the pond, where you turn south towards the town centre.

Heritage Walk A 2.25 mile walk (approx. 50 minute), created by the Thornbury and District Heritage Trust as a Millennium project, the 'Heritage Trail' encompasses the town's historic buildings. There are forty way-markers indicating the route, which starts outside the town hall, in the town centre.

Parish Walk A 2.3 mile (approx. 45 minute) circular leisure walk around Thornbury Parish taking in lots of sights and green areas. The trail starts at The Plain facing the Town Pump. Mainly on surfaced paths.

CYCLE PARKING

On the map we have highlighted some of the local attractions that have lots of cycle parking available, but across the area there are lots of places to park your bike – the vast majority of local attractions, green spaces, amenities and schools have convenient cycle parking and lots more is being added all the time.

1 THORNBURY CASTLE

Budding time travellers are well-advised to visit this stunning 16th century castle, which stands in 15 acres of regal splendour surrounded by vineyards and a Tudor garden. The castle started life as a manor but was given a major upgrade in 1511 by Edward Stafford, an English nobleman who became the 2nd Duke of Buckingham and whose subsequent accusation and execution are depicted in Shakespeare's Henry VIII. Thornbury Castle is now renowned for being one of the finest country house hotels in England – even if you are not a guest you can join the likes of Sophia Loren and Lawrence Olivier by visiting the hotel restaurant for some fine dining, or take a stroll through its historic landscaped grounds. Be sure to check the website for details of upcoming events – for more info, visit: thornburycastle.co.uk

2 THORNBURY MEDIEVAL FISHPONDS

Though ponds are a neglected historic feature of the national landscape, they once formed an integral part of the farming system. Some of the worst jobs in British history involved ponds: consider the poor leech collector, who had to use himself as a human trap, wading through ponds, bogs, and marshes to collect these blood-sucking worms for use in medicine. Ponds were also used to farm fish, ret cloth (the process of soaking hemp, flax, or other materials in water to soften and expose the fibres) and provide water for livestock and draft animals. Nowadays ponds are crucial for biodiversity – they support a huge diversity of life, including dragonflies, aquatic beetles, mayflies, caddisflies and other endangered amphibians such as the great crested newt.

Thornbury's medieval fishponds were constructed in the thirteenth century and form part of Thornbury's largest artificial wetland. In 2011 English Heritage announced that the Park Farm Medieval Fishponds were to be scheduled a "historic monument". The ponds are located on clay beds and fed by natural springs, and are an important habitat for local wildlife, including kingfishers.

3 COMMUNITY ORCHARD

Orchards are evocative places ripe for contemplation – synonymous with both human tradition and culture. Indeed, the latin noun malus can mean either 'apple' or 'evil', hence why the 'tree of knowledge of good and evil' in the Garden of Eden is often depicted as an apple tree (interestingly, the 'Eden' variety apple was developed in local Rockhampton). Moreover, the trees and plants you encounter in orchards have often been cultivated over hundreds or even thousands of years – they form part of our cultural treasure and are distinctly local.

This community orchard is a great place to visit – pop along at various times in the summer and autumn, and choose from a selection of apples, plums, blackcurrants, damsons, blackberries, and elderberries (just make sure you only take a couple, and leave enough for others). If you have little ones, this is a great way to teach them about different plants as you can bring them along and let them have a go at picking (and eating) some of the ripe fruits. When you sample some of the fruit in this orchard, consider that you are tasting the character of Thornbury – the literal fruits of its history, people, climate, soil, and water. Certainly food for thought!

4 THE CHANTRY

Lots of fun events take place at this beautiful listed building venue run by The Thornbury and District Community Association. Exercise classes, quiz nights, courses and clubs, murder mystery nights, plays, and Duke of Edinburgh are just a few examples of activities which have taken place here. Located at the bottom of Castle Street, The Chantry is one of the most easily identifiable buildings in Thornbury. You can hire its rooms (including six meeting rooms, two halls, and a walled garden) for meetings or functions, and the venue also offers a variety of audiovisual equipment, and a fully-equipped kitchen.

5 THE THORNBURY PUMP

This iconic pump would have once formed the centre of Thornbury town life, as locals gathered to collect their water. Though these community pumps are not widely used nowadays, we still use the expression 'parish pump' to describe places or forums where local matters are discussed.

6 THORNBURY TOWN CENTRE

Thornbury is known to be one of the best places to live in Bristol, and with its traditional shops and old-world feel it's not hard to see why this bustling market town is so sought after.

With a mix of traditional shops and High Street brands, plus a shopping centre and two supermarkets, Thornbury High Street has everything you need for a day's shopping. Be sure to visit the farmers market, which is held on the first and third Thursdays of each month between 9am and 1:30pm. Hungry visitors to the town are spoilt for choice, with a large selection of very good restaurants and cafes – from high quality pub fare, to Italian cuisine, there is something to suit all tastes and wallets.

Thornbury town also has a thriving community scene, which caters to a wide-range of interests – including over a dozen musical and drama groups, sports clubs, scouts, air, and sea cadets, plus history, charity, and social organisations. Thornbury also has a leisure centre, library, doctors, dentist, opticians and medical centre. There are ample opportunities to stay or get fit, with football, rugby, cricket, badminton, tennis, golf, buggy fit and a skate park.

The numerous musical and drama groups often perform in the Armstrong Hall near the town centre (seating 350) or the adjacent Cosham Hall (seating 140). Performances also take place in church halls and occasionally in the Leisure Centre.

Built in the 12th Century, St Mary's Church is the oldest surviving building in Thornbury, and is one of 7 churches in the area.

7 MUNDY PLAYING FIELDS

Grab your goggles, because Mundy Playing fields boasts a large open air water play area for children (and their adults) to splash around in. Bring a picnic rug and sit on one of the grassy bank slopes to get a good (and dry!) view of your children paddling in the splash area. The park also has a well-equipped children's play area, featuring a zip wire, embankment slides, roundabout, climbing frame, and balance bars. For those looking to get or stay fit, there is a range of adult exercise equipment, football pitches, a sports ground, and tennis courts. Located just off the High Street, you can easily pop to the shops for refreshments, but there is usually an ice cream van on site.

Mundy Playing fields were named after Violet Mundy, a local woman who generously bequeathed £6000 to Thornbury Parish Council in 1934 (an enormous sum, in those days) to create these much-loved playing fields.

8 THORNBURY & DISTRICT MUSEUM

If you are interested in local history, this is the place for you – with a comprehensive collection of exhibits and artefacts about life in Thornbury throughout the ages, this museum is the place to discover more about the history of your area. Take a peek into the lives of the local people long since gone – find out who they were, and how they lived. For little historians, there are a number of educational games and activities to enjoy, with a dedicated children's corner. To find out more about upcoming events and exhibitions, visit: thornburymuseum.org.uk

9 THORNBURY COMMUNITY GARDEN

The English country garden can be traced back to the 19th century, when households grew medicinal and culinary herbs alongside strikingly coloured flowers in humble garden plots. From the Roman period and for hundreds of years subsequently, the English garden was characterised by grandeur, order, and formality, demonstrating man's skill and mastery over nature. In contrast, the humble 'cottage garden' with its overflowing borders, tangled vines, and riotous colour seemed natural, effortless, and in harmony with nature, despite being as carefully and artfully constructed.

This RHS award-winning garden is the perfect place to view the classic cottage style in all its abundantly planted glory. Bursting with herbaceous perennial plants and annuals, it is a haven for bees, butterflies, and small birds, and is a wonderful place to while away a lazy afternoon in relaxed contemplation. There are also plenty of things for little ones to do; whether learning about the beautiful plants, spotting the various animals who come and go, or playing on the mosaic hopscotch. This garden is open to everyone to enjoy, has good wheelchair access, and is kept in top condition by a group of committed volunteers.

10 STREAMLEAZE GREEN

This small play park is a great place to climb, bounce, slide, and swing. Suitable for children and big kids alike. Featuring a multi-play piece, trampoline, new springer, and swings, there is lots to keep little ones entertained.

11 FILNORE ALLOTMENTS

Keen gardeners need look no further, as these allotments are a great place to grow quality organic produce and plants, meet new people, and increase your knowledge. Welcoming beginners and experienced growers alike, this friendly community allotment hosts regular socials, plant and produce swaps, and work parties to improve the site. The area is fenced off, fitted out with a storage container, and communal water collection facilities. If you are interested in what they do, or think you would like a plot, get in touch at allotments@sustainablethornbury.org

12 FILNORE WOODS

Woods are strange and magical places – the home to many of our folk traditions and the settings of stories. We have all heard tales about travellers who stray from the main path and find themselves deep in the woods, face-to-face with the unknown. Once upon a time, the boundaries of the mapped world ended at the edge of the woods – after that, stretched the unknown...

We know more about the woods now – we know that the flora, fauna and fungi are essential to local biodiversity and landscape. Filnore Woods is a Community Woodland maintained by passionate volunteers, which provides a diverse range of habitats for wildlife. It is a great place to visit and learn more about the natural world. Check the Filnore Woods blog for details of upcoming events and more: filnorewoods.blogspot.com
